GOV. ROSS ON THE CAPITOL.

He Receives a Suggestion from a Wacoite—The Commissioners' Case.

An EVENING NEWS reporter had a pleasant chat with Governor Ross in the McClelland Hotel lobby yesterday morning before he took his departure for Austin by the 1:15 train. In the course of his conversation, the Governor said that he had received a suggestion as to the remedying the trouble with the copper roof of the new state capitol, which is just now being so much discussed. The suggestion was offered by Judge O. H. Leland, and seems to afford an easy and practical solution of the trouble. Judge Leland's suggestion is that the copper roof be beveled after the manner of corrugated iron, but making the valleys much broader, then that the seams connecting the great copper sheets be arranged to run along the ridges, thus throwing the water into valleys, which being composed of solid sheets of copper, preclude any chance of leakage. The main idea in laying the roof in this manner is to obviate damage to the roof by the expansion and contraction of the metal as the valleys will take up the expansion and relieve the strain sustained under the present method by the extreme edges of the vast roof. The Governor signified his intention of submitting the idea to the contractors upon his return to Austin.

Further discussing the capitol troubles, Gov. Ross told the reporter that he proposed to demand of the contractors a strict compliance with the terms of the contract, which distinctly sets forth that provision shall be made for expansion and contraction. The contractors had, he said, asserted that it was impossible to make such provision in laying such an immense area of copper, and that he had replied to them that they should not have signed a contract committing themselves to the performance of impossibilities; but he claims that it is not impossible. As to other alleged defects, Governor Ross considers them trivial, and says that the contractors have offered to remedy them in any way suggested by the capitol board. On the whole, he regards the capitol as the most magnificent state building in the Union, and does not think that the Ireland administration made a bad contract by any means.

Governor Ross spoke feelingly of the matter of the attempted ousting of the capitol commissioners and said on that point he had felt himself forced to cross swords with the attorney general and demand that these men, gallant and patriotic old soldiers, should be confronted with the evidence against them, and permitted an opportunity to make a defence, as guaranteed by the Bill of Rights. These men had courted investigation and pleaded before the board that they were not dismissed in such a manner and their names go down in infamy to their children. Their good name was their fortune and the preservation of a pure and unsullied reputation their desire and they asked at the hands of the administration but that simple justice which is the inviolable right of even the lowest beggar in our free country; they were willing to be judged by the record and desired to be confronted by the evidence upon which the charges against them were founded.

The governor's remarks on this point were made with an air of firmness and determination that convinced the reporter that the commissioners were sure of being accorded full justice and would not be condemned unheard.

The vote on the case of the commissioners was the first, said Gov. Ross, on which the administration had failed to be unanimous, but this, he said, was only an incident and tended in no way toward a split, as the matter will be satisfactorily adjusted.

Alexandre Says

Patronizing Waco's manufacturers insures Waco's prosperity. If ever people will make it a point to purchase home products where they are as cheap and as good as the foreign produced article, it would give employment to a greater number of our people and give additional trade to our merchants. Last month four thousand cans and packages left my store all marked Waco, carrying the name on the label that Waco was large enough to support a Baking Powder Factory, Steam Coffee Roaster and a Spice Mill. Alexandre's Baking Powder is the best and sold everywhere for 25 cents. Three men and a boy find employment now and I will add other goods and manufacture them right here and employ more hands if I succeed.

Yours truly,
P. L. ALEXANDRE,
Baking Powder Manufacturer and Steam Coffee Roaster.
